What is Usenet?

Usenet is a worldwide distributed discussion network.

It is the original long-form messaging system that predates the Internet as we know it.

What is Usenet?

"Usenet is like a herd of performing elephants with diarrhea. Massive, difficult to redirect, awe-inspiring, entertaining, and a source of mind-boggling amounts of excrement when you least expect it."

— Gene Spafford, 1992

How does it work?

Users read and send articles (messages) on a News server. That server exchanges articles with other News servers in the network. The collection of servers is known as the Usenet.

Benefits of Usenet

- Open
- Decentralized
- Simplicity
- Owned by no one
- Resilient
- Resistant to censorship

Organization

Usenet is organized into Newsgroups. Each group is generally a topic for discussion for that group.

Newsgroups are organized into hierarchies.

alt.bitcoins is in the alt.* hierarchy

sci.crypt is in the sci.* hierarchy

The Big-8 Management Board

- Creates well-named, well-used newsgroups in the Big-8 Usenet hierarchies
- Makes necessary adjustments to existing groups
- Removes groups that are not well-used
- Assists and encourages the support of a canonical Big-8 newsgroup list by Usenet sites

A Little History...

In 1980...

There was no internet

There was only the ARPANET and few had access

It was commonly accepted at the time that to join the ARPANET took political connections and $100,000.

Better than email

Email had been around for years before Usenet, but it was limited to the people using the same computer

There was no way to directly talk to people outside with the ARPANET

Our Company: Press Release

Google Acquires Usenet Discussion Service and Significant Assets from Deja.com

Award-Winning Search Engine Launches Beta Version of Usenet Newsgroup Search

MOUNTAIN VIEW, Calif. - February 12, 2001 - Google Inc. today announced that it has acquired Deja.com's Usenet Discussion Service. This acquisition provides Google with Deja's entire Usenet archive (dating back to 1995), software, domain names including deja.com and dejanews.com, company trademarks, and other intellectual property. Financial terms of this transaction were not released.

Available now at <http://groups.google.com>, this powerful new Usenet search feature enables Google users to access the wealth of information contained in more than six months of Usenet newsgroup postings and message threads. Once the full Deja Usenet archive is added, users will be able to search and browse more than 500 million archived messages with the speed and efficiency of a Google search. In addition to expanding the amount of searchable data, Google will soon provide improved browsing capabilities and newsgroup posting.

AOL Pulls Plug on Newsgroup Service

PERSPECTIVE The world's largest ISP is cutting off direct access to one of the oldest, coolest -- and strangest -- parts of the Internet.

America Online has quietly announced that it will discontinue providing member access to Usenet newsgroups next month. In recent days, AOL subscribers who access keyword "Newsgroups" are greeted with a pop-up message informing them of the change: "Please Note: The AOL Newsgroup service will be discontinued in early 2005."

According to a notice on AOL's Web site, the newsgroup shut-off will occur in February, severing subscribers from the thousands of discussion groups that make up Usenet.

AOL officials weren't immediately available to explain the newsgroup shutdown. The ISP's pop-up message advises subscribers that newsgroup services are available from third-party providers. The message also notes that users with separate high-speed connections may be able to arrange newsgroup access through their broadband provider. AOL users can read newsgroups over the Web using Google Groups, the message said.

3 top ISPs to block access to sources of child porn

Verizon, Time Warner Cable, Sprint also agree to use a quick response system, provide $1.12M to fund further efforts

Computerworld - Verizon Communications Inc., Time Warner Cable Inc. and Sprint Nextel Corp. have signed an agreement with New York Attorney General Andrew Cuomo to shut down access to two major sources of child pornography.

This is the first time that three of the world's largest Internet service providers have agreed to eliminate access to child pornography newsgroups, which are major suppliers of the illegal images, according to a statement from Cuomo's office. The ISPs have also agreed to purge their servers of child pornography Web sites identified by the National Center for Missing & Exploited Children, the Cuomo said in the statement.

"Our strategy was somewhat of a different strategy than most law enforcement agencies take. Rather than going after the individual user, our strategy was to go toward the supplier side," Cuomo said at a press conference today. "If you have a pool of users and the pool keeps refilling, rather than trying to empty the pool with a bucket, go turn off the faucet and stop the flow of material."

An undercover investigation by the attorney general's office found that "newsgroups" -- online public bulletin boards where users can upload and download files -- are a major source of online child pornography, the statement said. Because users access newsgroups through their ISPs, Verizon, Time Warner Cable and Sprint have agreed to completely block access to all child pornography newsgroups.

A PIECE OF INTERNET HISTORY

Duke to shut Usenet server, home to the first electronic newsgroups

CARA BONNETT

SHARE THIS STORY

This week marks the end of an era for one of the earliest pieces of Internet history, which got its start at Duke more than 30 years ago.

On May 20, Duke will shut down its Usenet server, which provides access to a worldwide electronic discussion network of newsgroups started in 1979 by two Duke graduate students, Tom Truscott and Jim Ellis.

Working with a graduate student at UNC-Chapel Hill, they came up with a simple program to exchange messages and files between computers at Duke and UNC using telephone modems.

The "Users Network," Usenet for short, grew into an international electronic discussion forum with more than 120,000 newsgroups dedicated to various topics, from local dining to computer programming languages. Each group had a distinctive name such as soc.history or sci.math.

Back from the Dead?

Dead Board

Sometime in 2014, all of the members of the Big-8 Management board stepped down or had their memberships lapse without anyone to take up the mantle

Dead Board

Without the Big-8 board, no new newsgroups could be created, old ones could not be removed, and changes could not be made to existing newsgroups.

Dead Board

Groups that had once been moderated were now completely silent without a moderator.

It looked like the death of much of the Usenet was finally at hand.

A Thread from Reddit

Big 8 Management Board

I thought some of you might be interested in this. This is an email that I wrote earlier today. I will post again if I get a reply.

Dear Big 8 board,

I was interested in created a new comp.* newsgroup. However, the latest message in the news.groups.proposals mailing list is from 2018.

I would like to know what is the status of the Big 8 board. Has this organization been decommissioned? If not, I will submit a new RFD, possibly the first in nearly 2 years, and I would like to blog about my experience and try to garner new curiosity about Usenet on Reddit and other places.

Thank you for your time.

A Glimmer of Hope

Shortly after contacting former board members, we were asked by them if we could tell a little about ourselves with the goal of taking over the board.

My Goals for the B8MB

- See the B8MB staffed with active volunteers.
- Make contacts with current Usenet providers to ensure that the canonical list of Big-8 newsgroups is observed and used.
- Begin accepting RFD's for new newsgroups. Growth is life!
- Begin auditing unused, outdated newsgroups
- Make contacts with journalists, YouTubers, and others in the IT world to get the word out that Usenet is in fact alive and well and to drive new users to it.

After a careful review of the Big 8 Management Board's activity and process, all remaining members of the Big 8 Management Board opted not to consider re-election and instead have voted to install two new volunteers as the new members of the Big 8 Management Board. These two volunteers are:

We believe these volunteers have the technical and social skills necessary to maintain the Big-8. Please give them your support while they develop their vision for the future mission and goals of the Big 8 Board.

Over the next few weeks, I set up a new web and mail server for our own needs.

And then the web server where the website had been hosted crashed before we were able to access it.

a (free) operating system

I'm doing a (free) operating system (just a hobby, won't be big and professional like gnu) for 386(486) AT clones.

I've currently ported bash(1.08) and gcc(1.40), and things seem to work.

This implies that I'll get something practical within a few months, and I'd like to know what features most people would want. Any suggestions are welcome, but I won't promise I'll implement them :-)

Subject: LINUX is obsolete

As most of you know, for me MINIX is a hobby, something that I do in the evening when I get bored writing books and there are no major wars, revolutions, or senate hearings being televised live on CNN. My real job is a professor and researcher in the area of operating systems.

As a result of my occupation, I think I know a bit about where operating are going in the next decade or so.

Do you pine for the nice days of minix-1.1, when men were men and wrote their own device drivers? Are you without a nice project and just dying to cut your teeth on a OS you can try to modify for your needs? Are you finding it frustrating when everything works on minix? No more all-nighters to get a nifty program working? Then this post might be just for you :-)

This isn't funny. I hope you get so much mail in response to this that you're reading it for a week straight. Fk you.

get out of our network!!!

If your net contact is used as another channel for government-authored propaganda, not too many of us will be interested in reading your messages.

Wow!

Is this for real? Honest-to-god Russia? Gee. I never thought that I'd see it. Does this imply that Unix is behind the Iron curtain?

I want to voice my support of those who feel that the "April Fool's" joke about the USSR on the USENET was bad form. Particularly when it appeared in what many of us had come to rely on as the authoritative source for news about the network.

Welcome! [From an isolated CIA outpost]

Does anyone seriously doubt that Chernenko, who has no expertise in foreign policy, and probably can't speak, let alone write, in another language, would post something to the net? That joke was in good taste. Anyone who feels taken in by that joke should ask him/herself why the net is so central to his/her life.

This is my position paper for the panel discussion "Governmental and Social Implications of Digital Money" at the upcoming Computers, Freedom, and Privacy (CFP) Conference in San Francisco, March 11-14, 1997.

This paper summarizes several of the ideas I often focus on. A much longer version of this paper is slated to appear later this year in the new Vernor Vinge re-issue of "True Names." My paper, "True Nyms and Crypto Anarchy," deals with the issues of pseudonyms, digital money, and crypto anarchy at length.

So, what can be meant by saying the Cypherpunks list was an "anarchy"? What most of us meant, surely, was that there was no leadership save that of leading through one's words. No ruling board of directors, no elections, no voting process, no "top." ("no top," "no arch," anarchy)

alt.tasteless vs
rec.pets.cats

I have two cats - Sootikin (Sooti for short) a 2-year old female, and Choad.

Choad (stupid name) is a neutered tom who was dumped on me by my scumbag ex-roommate (he had been given it by one of the two women he was dating at the time).

I'm not what you would call a real studly type guy (although I have a lot of women friends), so when I date it's really important to me. Anyway, Sooti goes into heat something fierce (sometimes it seems like it's two weeks on, two weeks off). I had a date a while back, when she was really bad. Yowling and presenting all the time - not the most auspicious setting for a date. While dinner was cooking, I tried to stimulate her vagina with a Q-tip because I had heard that one can induce ovulation that way. My date came into the bathroom while I was doing this, and needless to say I don't think she bought my explanation. The date was a very icy experience after that.

Choad's problem is that he has really stinky shits (paint peelers).

During my most recent date - I don't know if this was a jealousy thing - he shit in the bathtub. I live in a loft, and the bathroom is open for ventilation, so in a few seconds we were gasping for air. Another date ruined, I'm getting desperate.

What should I do. I love my cats, so I don't want to get rid of them, but I can't go on like this any more. It's my love life, or them. Please help!!!
